English

For your English today, I'd like you to create your own comic strip, similar to the one from Tuesday.

In your home learning book, either using the template below or one of your own, I want you to create and draw your own characters and their settings (might be pirates on a ship on the sea; astronauts in space; school children on a bus or Ancient Greek Olympians – YOU decide).

Once you have drawn out your comic strip, then you have to decide what your characters are saying to each other, using speech bubbles inside your comic strip to show their direct speech (The words they actually say - similar to template 2).
